Law of Torts, Consumer Protection & Motor Vehicle Act.

(Paper No.1.1)

INTRODUCTION:

Law of Torts is primarily concerned with the redressal of wrongful civil actions by awarding compensation for personal injury, injury to reputation, psychological damage, economic loss or incursions on private property as a result of accidents, disease or intentional acts. With rapid industrialization, law of tort has taken a dynamic shape and came to be used as an effective remedy against manufacturers and industrial units for their activities injurious to human beings. Product liability is now assuming a new dimension in developed economics. Hence, the basic purpose for introducing this law to the students is to make them understand the constituents of tort and its general principles.

This syllabus provides a foundation in tort law and explores specialized statutes like the Motor Vehicles Act and Consumer Protection Act. By studying these laws, students will understand the legal mechanisms available for addressing civil wrongs, traffic-related incidents, and consumer grievances.

COURSE OBJECTIVES:

- 1.To explore the nature, scope, and function of tort law within the broader context of the legal system.
- 2.To develop students' ability to analyze and apply legal principles to factual scenarios, understanding how tort law operates in practice.
- 3.To encourage critical thinking regarding the justifications for imposing liability and the impact of tort law on society.
4. To familiarize students with the fundamental principles of tort law, including negligence, strict liability, absolute liability and so on.
- 5.To study specific torts, such as assault, battery, false imprisonment, defamation, nuisance, and trespass, and understand the conditions under which liability arises.
6. To educate students on the general and specific defenses available in tort cases, such as consent, necessity, self-defense, and contributory negligence and
7. To examine how these defenses affect the outcome of tort claims and their significance in determining liability.
8. To provide students with an understanding of the various remedies available in tort law, including compensatory damages, punitive damages, and injunctions.

LEARNING OUTCOMES:

On the successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Understand the general principles of the law of torts.
2. Demonstrate substantive knowledge of tort law, Draft legal memoranda and apply legal rules to varied factual situations.

3. Recognize various forms of legal authority, read and analyse legal cases accurately and efficiently.

Law Of Contract- I

(Paper No.1.3)

INTRODUCTION

The law of contract is a fundamental area of law that deals with the creation and enforcement of agreements between parties. It is essential for the functioning of any society as it underpins commerce, trade, and a wide range of personal and professional relationships. The Indian Contract Act, 1872, is the primary legislation governing contracts in India, providing a legal framework for the formation, performance, and enforceability of contracts.

This course covers Sections 1-75 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, which outline the general principles of contract law. These sections define what constitutes a contract, the elements necessary for its formation, and the rules governing the performance and breach of contracts. Additionally, the course explores standard form contracts and electronic contracts (e-contracts), which have become increasingly relevant in today's digital and fast-paced commercial environment.

COURSE OBJECTIVES:

To apply the basic principles in contractual relations, there need to be a clear understanding of the basic sources of law of contract. As the major source of contract law being the principles of English common law, we need to discuss the evolution of law of contract and the similarities and dissimilarities with the English law of contract. Hence, this course is designed to acquaint the students with the conceptual and operational parameters of these various general principles of contractual relations. Specific enforcement of contract is an important aspect of the law of contract. Analysis of the kinds of contracts that can be specifically enforced and the methods of enforcement forms a significant segment of this study. A practical overview of Specific Relief Act which gives a judicial remedy to enforce performance of contract is also included in the study.

LEARNING OUTCOMES:

1. Understanding the common types of contracts, the situations in which the party who is not in a bargaining position is exploited and remedies for the same.
2. After the completion of this module students will be conversant with the principles underlying the grant of reliefs and the different remedies provided under the Act.

Labour And Industrial Laws – I

(Paper No. 1.5)

INTRODUCTION:

Labour and industrial laws in India are a crucial part of the legal framework that governs the relationship between employers, employees, and trade unions. These laws aim to create a balanced and fair environment for industrial relations, ensuring the rights of workers are protected while also fostering an environment conducive to industrial growth and stability.

The course on Labour and Industrial Laws primarily focuses on two key pieces of legislation: the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 and the Trade Unions Act, 1926. The Industrial Disputes Act provides mechanisms for the investigation and settlement of industrial disputes, promoting peaceful resolution and industrial harmony. It also deals with issues such as strikes, lockouts, layoffs, and retrenchments. The Trade Unions Act facilitates the formation and regulation of trade unions, safeguarding the collective rights of workers to organize and advocate for their interests.

COURSE OBJECTIVES:

1. To provide a comprehensive understanding of the legislative framework governing ILO, labour relations in India, focusing on the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, and the Trade Unions Act, 1926.
2. To examine the principles and key provisions of these Acts, including the rights and duties of employers, employees, and trade unions.
3. To explore the mechanisms provided under the Industrial Disputes Act for the resolution of industrial disputes, and the role of various authorities involved.
4. To understand the formation, registration, rights, and liabilities of trade unions under the Trade Unions Act, and their role in industrial relations.
5. To analyze landmark judicial decisions that have shaped the interpretation and implementation of labour laws in India.
6. To discuss contemporary issues in the field of labour law, including globalization, technological advancements, and changes in labour policies.

LEARNING OUTCOMES:

On the successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

1. Demonstrate a clear understanding of the legal framework of ILO and principles underpinning labour and industrial laws in India.
2. Critically analyze the provisions of the Industrial Disputes Act and the Trade Unions Act and their application in various industrial scenarios.
3. Interpret and evaluate judicial decisions related to labour laws, understanding their impact on the development of industrial jurisprudence in India.

4. Apply knowledge of dispute resolution mechanisms under the Industrial Disputes Act to hypothetical industrial disputes, proposing appropriate legal solutions.
5. Assess the role and functioning of trade unions in industrial relations and their impact on labour welfare and industrial peace.
6. Engage critically with current debates and issues in labour law, articulating informed perspectives on the future direction of labour policy in India.
